HOMER'S HOMESICK

BIG NEW YORK DOES NOT SATISFY IN SUMMER TIME.

HE DREAMS OF "MARY"

As He Writes His Latest Story in Leslie's, "Mother and I Go Abroad," and the Second is Out.

Homer Croy is getting homesick, we guess. He is over his eyes in work, of course, up there in New York, getting out Leslie's Weekly. But it is the "good old summer time" now, and the beautiful sights and big noises of the city can't keep him from seeing the green fields and big trees around Maryville or from hearing the buzzing of the bees in the orchard out on his father's farm.

Along in May he had a story in Leslie's entitled "Mother and I Go Abroad," and of course, with so homey a title as that he just had to say something about Maryville, if only to use the name. So that is the reason we think he is homesick. It's near vacation time and he's naturally thinking about getting back to see the folks and rest. Here is the way the story goes:

"Mother," I said, setting down the coal bucket, "let's go abroad. Your black dress's good as new, and I haven't felt my rheumatism all summer."

"Oh, lawsy," said mother, wiping the crumbs off the oilcloth with the edge of her hand. "I'd just love to. I don't get the satisfaction out of stereoscope pictures I used to and we're getting along, but who'd take care of the chickens?"

"Pud Ratch," I said. "The doctor told him he mustn't eat anything fattening. You know how fat he is now—always has to rest between the front gate and the porch. We can trust them in his hands."

So we bargained with Pud Ratch and told him we'd bring him back something from Europe—a sacred beetle or a Dubar or something we could carry in our telescopes, and got ready to go.

"I want to climb Mount Matterhorn, said mother, "and have our pictures taken on top, my hand on your shoulder and you with your left hand up to your eyes and your right hand pointing off across the valley like those two Swiss people in that milk chocolate advertisement. Only I positively refuse to wear those short skirts. What would Brother Hamby think of me looking as though there was a rouse in my bedroom?"

"All right, mother. We'll have some lunch put up and go. Only we got to get back to the hotel early—you know what night air does to my rheumatism."

So everybody came down to the station to see us off.

"I want you to bring me some Colonial pewters," said Mrs. Houck. "I don't care what kind they are, just so long as they've got some English writing on them in which you can't tell a s from an f. Here's the money, and try to get saucers."

"I don't want to put you to any trouble," said Mrs. Sproud, who whistled through her nose, "but here's a piece of percale I wish you would match up over there in some German or Turkish department store. I've worn that dress eight years and every time any strangers come to town they think it is brand new, but everybody in Maryville is familiar with it. If I can get enough to make over the waist it'll look like a new dress. Be careful of your rheumatism over there, isom—London's awfully damp."

Just before the train whistled in and everybody was getting pretty excited, and Mrs. Sproud was sitting down with her knees spread out as if she was stemming gooseberries, Brother Hamby of our church crooked his finger at me and led me clear around to where they loaded freight cars.

"Brother Isom," he said, wetting his lips and looking excited, "can I trust you?"

"Yes, Brother Hamby," I answered, like and actor.

"Here's a dollar. All my life I have been wanting to see what was in one of those knives that has a hole in it and you put it up to your eye and look in, then turn around to see if anybody is watching you. I'm getting old and I had that pain in my side again last week, and I can't die content until I know what is in one of those knives. Get mine in Paris, won't you?—and never tell anybody. Maybe you'd better send it back by mail as soon as you get there—I never know when that pain's coming back."

I asked him if he minded if I looked in the hole first, and he said no. Then I told him I didn't mind that job at all and would keep on looking till I found a good one.

Then the train started and everybody waved us good-by.

"Be sure to take good care of our chickens," I called to Pud Ratch, and he held up a fat arm that looked as though he was waving a sack of flour.

"Mother," I said, when we got to the dock, "look how big that ship is. It couldn't turn around in our chautauqua grounds, and it's got three chimneys. I'd hate to make the fires on this ship, and where do they keep their coal oil and coals?"

Everybody was pushing and jamming as if the morning mail had just come in.

"Mother," I said, looking at the great white ship, "what a noble and inspiring sight this master of the briny deep is, floating as calm and peaceful as a shingle in a bathtub."

Oh, by the way, Isom," said Mo, "did you tell Mr. Sproud to fix the plumbing in the kitchen before we got back?"

"We must hunt up the captain and tell him we're here safe and sound, and ask him to show us our bedroom," I said, trying to make mother feel comfortable. "It would be nice if he knew somebody back in Maryville and would give us a bedroom near the kitchen—walking must be hard, as trembly as these ships are, and especially when the wind's up."

"Yes, I wouldn't be surprised if he knew somebody from Maryville," she said. "I never met anybody in my life who didn't know somebody from there or who hadn't been through there. When I tell them about our City Beautiful and our lecture course, they all promise to come and visit us."

I went up to a man with a serious look on his face and shiny buttons on his coat and said, "Are you the captain?"

"No," he said, "I am the steward. You will find the captain below."

"Below what?" I asked.

Mr. Steward shifted his feet and smiled kind of foolishly. "Why, just below," he explained, looking at us harder than ever.

Then I saw that this must be his first trip over and didn't bother with him any more.

Then I went up to another man with gold braid on his cap, and asked him if he was the captain.

"No, I'm the second steward—the captain's aft."

"I just met your brother, I said, "and he said that the captain was down in the basement. I should think that he ought to be in the parlor making the people feel at home."

I guess that cut him pretty hard, for he walked over to another employe and began talking and looking at mother and me.

"They must be twins," said mother. "Who?" I asked.

"Why, the Steward boys. They both got the same kind of caps and buttons. It's nice they can both be together—I wonder if they write home often."

I saw a man with whiskers standing out on deck.

"Have you seen Captain Aft lately?" I asked.

He winked hard and shook his whiskers like a rug. "I am the captain, but my name is Sproud."

"Oh, exclaimed mother. "Are you any relation to Claude Sproud of Maryville?"

"I am afraid not," said the captain, hunting through his whiskers for a raveling. "Is there anything I can do for you?"

"Can you put us where we can get the morning sun?"

"There's lots of it on deck."

I couldn't get over their having an elevator on the ship, and I rode up and down so many times that I got right well acquainted with the man who had the concession. He said he had heard of Maryville but had never been in it. Another thing that got my eye was having a swimming tank on the ship and a foot doctor. His wife had run away and left him, but I kind of think he drank.

One day the ship began to pitch and heave. I could feel something rolling around inside my stomach like a loose doorknob and I rushed to the front porch to—but that is a personal matter. After I had got my stomach content with its lot in life I saw that my neighbor was mother.

Automobile Drivers Ought to Be Careful When Driving in Front of Churches on Sunday evening.

The automobile drivers ought to be careful when they are driving on Sunday evening and ought to pay a little heed to people who are attending church services. Many complaints have been made of the great noise of the autos, especially while near a church which greatly annoys the people in attendance at the church service and also the minister. It is thought that if the attention of the motorists is called to this matter, they will probably heed the request.

SUDDEN DEATH FROM APOPLEXY.

George L. Fisher Died Thursday Morning at 6:30, After Two Hours' Illness.

George L. Fisher, an old resident of Maryville, died Thursday morning at 6:30 o'clock of apoplexy, with which he was stricken about two hours previous to his death. Mr. Fisher had been about as usual Wednesday and in the evening had attended to several little chores he had taken upon himself to do since he has been at the home of his son, Jesse L. Fisher, at 719 East Fourth street, where his death occurred.

Mr. Fisher and his wife had been at their son's home for two months or more, where Mrs. Fisher was taken with pneumonia and from which she is just now slowly recovering. About 4:30 Thursday morning Mrs. Fisher was awakened by Mr. Fisher's restlessness. She spoke to him several times and asked him if he was ill, and receiving no reply called to her son and his family, who were sleeping in a tent in the yard. By the time they reached the sick man he appeared in a dying condition, and the arrival of a physician confirmed their fears, for nothing could be done to save his life.

The funeral arrangements will not be completed until the arrival of a son, Rev. Grundy Fisher of Minneapolis, Minn.

Mr. Fisher was born in Jefferson county, Ohio, April 20, 1834, and went to Iowa in young manhood and later came to Missouri. He was married at Stewartville, Mo., April 1, 1868, to Miss Lucy Grundy. They came to Maryville about thirty years ago and have lived at their home at 919 East Fifth street ever since. Two sons were born to them, Rev. Grundy Fisher, pastor of the First Christian church at Minneapolis, and Jesse L. Fisher, who is in the plumbing business in this city.

BOYS' STATE FAIR SCHOOL.

Nodaway County is Entitled to a Representative—The Rules for Selecting the Representative.

The Missouri State Fair Directors have decided to have a Boys' State Fair School composed of one boy from each county of the state. The boys of this school shall be cared for in Sedalia and be the guests of the fair. Their selection in the various counties shall be according to rules prescribed by the following committee: Wm. P. Evans, chairman; John T. Stinson, secretary; W. A. Dallmeyer, F. B. Mumford.

The committee prescribes the following preliminary rules:
Geo. W. Reavis, Jefferson City, is appointed manager of the Boys' State Fair School.

County Superintendent of Schools Oakerson and one other to be chosen by the committee shall have charge of the contest in Nodaway county to determine the county representative.

The contest shall be open to boys who shall on October 1, 1912, be between 12 and 17 years of age, and shall be based one-half on elementary school subjects and one-half on agriculture according to rules to be announced by the committee.

The representative selected under these rules shall have no claim on the fair for their expenses in going to the fair and returning from it, but it shall be the duty of the fair to provide free entertainment, instruction and supervision during the fair. Failure on the part of any county representative to comply with the camp requirements shall be ground for expulsion and shall cancel any obligation of the fair.

The boys of the school shall give one-half of their time during the fair to such duties as the committee shall prescribe. The other part of their time shall be devoted to study of the exhibits under expert direction.

An examination will be conducted in each county between September 1st and 15th, 1913, to determine the county representative. The grades in this examination shall be based one-fourth on each of the following:

An essay of 250 to 300 words on "Corn Growing."

Five questions in elementary agriculture.

Five questions in arithmetic.

Five questions in geography.

Questions in the last three subjects will be furnished by state manager.

This is the first attempt of the kind in this state and it is to be hoped that the county superintendents will urge the boys of their respective counties to enter this contest. The successful boy will have an opportunity to enjoy the fair and receive valuable instruction, with only the cost of transportation. While at the fair the boys will be in charge of competent supervisors and no parent need have any fears about their safety. Every effort will be made by the board of agriculture to make this boy's school a pleasant and profitable occasion.

They had a ballroom and dancing and ladies carrying the end of their dress by a string on their arm.

"You come away," said mother, the first time she saw them dancing. "I see they've got Tal'nadge's sermons in the library." But I slipped back the first opportunity.

"Isom," she said, the next day, "I don't believe that is as immoral as I first thought. I just found out they have a dancing teacher on board. They say it's good exercise."

Before we had got across mother had mastered the turkey-trot, and one day I caught her, secretly trying the Boston dip in our bedroom.

I got mother and a lady with an ear-trumpet one day talking about the missionary movement, and slipped away where they were betting on the ship's run for day. With the air whistling down to the bottom of my lungs I never felt so young in my life and put up $20. Of course, I lost, and I lost hair trying to explain to mother what had become of that money.

When we got over on the other side, I was willing to stay on and on, but not so with mother. "Oh, I'm enjoying every inch of it," she said, "but we must get back for the chalet. You know Uncle Amos and his family are coming this year and they are expecting us to entertain them and goodness knows how we are going to do it unless we get another bed. Do you think a white enamel bed would look gaudy for old folks like us that have never had anything except walnut and feathers?"

Everybody was down to meet us when we got back, and before mother kissed Mrs. Sprout she put the percale in her arms, but she didn't tell her that they didn't have the same kind of department stores over on the other side, and that she had to get it watched in Kansas City. Mrs. Sprout said that it was just lovely and that it was the only imported percale she had ever had in her life, and asked us over to supper.

"Did you get it in Paris or London," asked Mrs. Sprout, taking the bolt over to the light.

"We looked at the French and English patterns, but they didn't suit at all—didn't look exclusive enough—so we just waited around until we came across something that we thought would suit you. You're looking well, aren't you, Mrs. Sprout? Oh, tell us about the fire in the Houch Livery barn, and who is going to serve at the oyster festival."

When we counted the chickens there were six missing, and Pud Ratch looked red and tried to change the subject. He said they must have wandered off and got run over by the cars, but mother and I didn't say anything. She had big enough sin hanging on her head—the percale—and I knew deep down in my heart that I was a gambler—or at least twenty dollars worth.

Guaranteed Eczema Remedy.

The constant itching, burning, redness, rash and disagreeable effects of eczema, tetter, salt rheum, itch, piles and irritating skin eruptions can be readily cured and the skin made clear and smooth with Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment. Mr. J. C. Eveland, of Bath, Ill., says: "I had eczema twenty-five years and had tried everything. All failed. When I found Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment I found a cure." This ointment is the formula of a physician and has been in use for years—not an experiment. That is why we can guarantee it. All druggists, or by mail, Price 50c. JAPAN'S REJOINDER DELIVERED TO BRYAN

Takes Position That Webb Law is Discriminating.

Washington, June 5.—Japan's rejoinder to the United States' reply to its protest against the California anti-alien land law, delivered personally by Ambassador Chinda to Secretary Bryan, sets out why the Tokyo government continues to regard the Webb law as discriminatory against Japanese, in derogation of the equalities of treatment prescribed by international law and a violation of the treaty of 1911.

Nothing in the nature of an ultimatum is contained in the note. Its general tone is to invite further discussion of the controverted points and it contains nothing tending to take up a final issue.

The Japanese note was very long and its nature entirely argumentative. Secretary Bryan and Ambassador Chinda were in accord that no good purpose could be served at this time by a public discussion of the delicate question and therefore both officials gave notice that any attempt to publish what might purport to be even the substance of the three communications which have now passed between the two governments must be based entirely upon speculation. It is known, however, that the whole tone of the rejoinder is that of a dignified and orderly presentation of Japan's view of the case, concluding with an invitation to further negotiations.

Senator Dillingham of Vermont has a new plan by which he hopes to reduce immigration from southern and eastern Europe and Asia. WALL STREET PRICES SUFFER BIG BREAK Issues Carried to Lowest Quotations in Long Time.

New York, June 5.—The irregularity and heaviness which have been the distinguishing features of the local stock market recently culminated in an avalanche of liquidation, greater than any witnessed for many months, which carried prices of important issues to the lowest quotations registered in a considerable period of time.

Among the many economic and technical causes which contributed in greater or less degree to the retrograde movement may be cited the distrust engendered by the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad receivership, discouragement at the apparent inability of the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific roads to arrive at a satisfactory solution of their troubles, and dispatches from Washington indicating that the administration intends to renew action against so-called trusts, more particularly the tobacco interests.

In this connection tobacco shares, on light dealings, declined from 5 to 17 points. The decline was partly checked upon advices from Washington that all reports respecting government prosecution were premature as yet. Short covering helped materially in further recovery recorded in final dealings, but net results showed an unusually large number of severe losses.

Attexau Denies Plot.

Boston, June 5.—Frederick E. Attexau, codefendant with President William M. Wood of the American Woolen company and Dennis J. Collins, in the dynamite conspiracy trial, told his story to the jury. He denied that he had conspired with the other defendants to "plant" dynamite at Lawrence to prejudice public opinion against the striking textile operatives last year.

New Trial for Becker Asked.

New York, June 5.—A new trial for Charles Becker, the police lieutenant convicted of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, and now in the death house at Sing Sing, was sought in the supreme court on the ground that new evidence has been discovered.

TWO SUGAR LOBBIES FOUND

Senators Discover Evidence of Activities of Both Factions.

GENERAL OFFICES MAINTAINED

Senator Ransdell says Spreckels Interests Spending More Money Than Louisiana Cane Growers—Pittman Sees Lobby.

Washington, June 5.—Ramifications of the sugar tariff fight being conducted outside the halls of congress gave the senate "lobby investigating committee" a busy two hours. With Senator Ransdell of Louisiana as the chief witness, members of the investigating committee pried into every phase of the fight between the free trade and the anti-free sugar forces and established the fact that general offices are maintained by both factions, and that a systematic and organized fight has been carried out for and against the free sugar provision endorsed by President Wilson.

The activity of the sugar tariff forces was partially responsible for President Wilson's statement that powerful lobbying influences were at work in Washington to effect changes in the tariff bill. Several names were added to the list of persons who will testify Saturday as to whether or not they are "lobbyists." These included employees of a bureau maintained here by the Louisiana sugar growers and various persons who have been connected with the anti-free sugar fight.

Senator Ransdell discussed freely the organized activity of the Louisiana sugar cane growers, but believed little money had been spent, as compared with the amount spent by Claus Spreckels, the Federal Sugar Refining company and Frank C. Lowrey of New York, said to be an employee of that company, in the attempt to create a public sentiment in favor of free sugar.

Pittman Sees Lobby.

Senator Pittman declared it was evident that lobbies existed in Washington and that men poured in to protest against the Underwood bill when it reached the senate seemingly "by a concerted movement." He agreed that there had been a large lobby or delegation of Alaskan people in Washington urging the government to spend millions for the construction of railroads in Alaska. He did not consider it improper. "I know of my own knowledge," said Senator Pittman "there has been a premeditated, sustained and expensive effort made by the wool growers to intimidate their representatives to support certain measures in the belief that the people favor them."

Lane and McCumber Testify.

Senator Lane said he was a physician and had no interest in anything affected by the tariff.

"That handsome man back there by the wall was very much worried about wool," he said, pointing to a listener. The handsome man said his name was S. W. McClure, secretary of the National Wool Growers' association.

Lane said he did not consider men who called on him "lobbyists." He thought they were looking after their own interests. He knew of no lobby, but said he believed money was being used to try to convince people that bad effects would follow the tariff bill.

Senator McCumber said he produced wheat, oats, rye, flax and sometimes potatoes, all of which were "disastrously affected" by the tariff. No one had attempted to influence him, he said, and he knew of no use of money or the maintenance of a lobby to influence any legislation.

Farmers Object to Free List.

Action by the subcommittee to be ratified by the finance committee in putting live stock and grain on the free list, retaining on the free list also meats, flour and oatmeal, it is expected, will arouse protests from farmers and farm organizations, but the committee will hold to this solution of the problem presented in the Underwood bill of equalizing agricultural raw materials and their products. One vigorous protest came from the corn belt of Iowa before the action was announced.

Clergyman Votes Against Local Option

Springfield, June 5.—Representative F. E. J. Lloyd of Chicago, Progressive, a clergyman, voted against the residence district bill, a local option measure which was passed by the lower house of the Illinois legislature. Ouster Proceedings Are Begun.

Denver, June 5.—Ouster proceedings against Henry J. Arnold, Allison Stocker and Daniel M. Sullivan, who refuse to deliver their respective offices of mayor, treasurer and sheriff of Denver to the newly elected commissioners, were filed in the district court.

JACK JOHNSON IS SENTENCED

Negro Prize Ring Champion Given
Year and Day in Joliet.

MUST PAY HEAVY FINE, ALSO,

One Thousand Dollars, in Addition to Penitentiary Sentence, for Black on Charge of Violating Mann White Slave Law.

Chicago, June 5.—Jack Johnson, the negro heavyweight champion, was sentenced to one year and one day in the state penitentiary at Joliet and fined $1,000 for violation of the Mann white slave act.

Sentence was pronounced on Johnson after Federal Judge Carpenter had denied a motion for a new trial made by counsel for the negro. Johnson obtained two weeks' time in which to prepare a writ of error, and the bond for $50,000, on which he has been at liberty since his conviction, was allowed to stand.

Half a dozen deputy United States marshals, who had grouped themselves about Johnson in anticipation of resistance when the prison sentence was given, left the room when Judge Carpenter announced that the fighter could continue at liberty.

Johnson left the court room declaring that he would not give up the fight for liberty and that if the writ of error were denied he would make further appeals.

"It has been hard to determine what punishment should be meted out in this case," said Judge Carpenter in passing sentence. "We have had many cases where violations of the Mann act have been punished with a fine only. We have had other cases where defendants have been sentenced to one or two years in the penitentiary."

"The circumstances in this case have been aggravating. The life of the defendant, by his own admissions, has not been a moral one. The defendant is one of the best known men of his race and his example has been far-reaching."

"The sentence shall be that the defendant shall be confined a year and a day in the Joliet penitentiary and that he shall be fined $1,000."

WOMEN UNIONISTS MEET

Miss Wilson Urges Purchasers to Insist on Union Label.

St. Louis, June 5.—Miss Agnes Hart Wilson, daughter of the secretary of labor in President Wilson's cabinet, addressed the National Woman's Trade Union League convention here and urged that the women purchasers of clothing be educated to demand the union label.

"I don't favor the boycott," said Miss Wilson, "but I do urge that we start a movement to bring out the garment makers' label on women clothing. The names of all union makers of women's clothing should be mentioned prominently in the official publication of this league. That will advertise the goods and it will advertise us."

Miss Wilson told of her personal investigations of social conditions in Washington, where she found women and children working long hours, under unsanitary conditions and for poor pay.

WOMAN STOPS KING'S HORSE

Suffragette Pulls Down Horse and Rider in the Derby Race.

Bpsom, England, June 5.—The race for the Derby was one of the most sensational on record. It was made memorable by a daring militant suffragette outrage, in which Emily Wilding Davison was terribly injured while trying to stop King George's horse, Anmer, when he was running at full speed around Tattenham corner, pulling down both horse and rider; by the disqualification for bumping of Cragenour, the favorite, after he had finished first, and by the award of the race with its stakes of $32,500 to a rank outsider, Abouyer, a 100 to 1 shot.

King George, Queen Mary and a large assembly of royalties were witnesses of these exciting incidents, which caused something like consternation among the immense crowds.

INSANE PATIENTS COME

TO RESCUE OF KEEPER.

Milwaukee, June 5.—Five insane patients at the Emergency hospital came to the aid of Dr. R. L. Williams when Julius Jeswein, an insane and enraged patient, attacked an orderly.

Jeswein is the man who became insane after laughing for sixteen straight hours. He went to a vaudeville theater and after hearing a joke began to laugh. He was ejected from the theater, but continued to laugh until arrested.

Gunboat Sent to Retake Matamoros.

Mexico City, June 5.—A force of 1,000 federal soldiers, including a detachment of artillery, left Vera Cruz on the gunboat Vera Cruz for Matamoros. The authorities believe that they will be able to recapture the town, which surrendered to the constitutionalist forces.

STAVER BUGGY TALKS

STAVER
How They Differ From Others

STAVER SPRINGS are noted for their easy riding qualities, due to the superior oil tempered graded steel, which is thoroughly tested before being assembled. The front spring consists of four leaves, which are ground and adjusted to carry their part of the load, while others use three and are not adjusted. Leaves have French point which give them a finished and neat appearance. OPEN SPRING CUSHION with steel straps and long elastic spiral springs combined with the body springs make the Staver the easiest riding buggy on the market.

Good for Its Own Sake.

By James A. Edgerton.

A principle is impersonal. It belongs to one as much as another. It belongs to him most who most belongs to it, who is most loyal to it. Good is principle. It should be loved because it is good.

The right thing is the only thing worth while. Wrong is a negation, a subtraction from our attainment and happiness. We talk of self denials, but we deny ourselves the thing that is not for us in order that we may have more abundantly of the thing that is for us.

In the real sense the only self denial is in doing evil. That does take away from us actually. But to deny ourselves a thing that injures another is to injure ourselves for action and reaction are equal. So that to refrain from injuring another actually helps ourselves.

This, in a way, is the selfish view of the idea. We do right because that there is an instinct in the soul that furnishes us most happiness. But tells us to do good without stopping to consider what its effects on us may be; to do good because it is good; to do good for the good's sake. And this is the proper motive from which to act. This takes out the element of self seeing and puts us on the impersonal plane of acting from a principle. In this case we help others because we wish them well and want to make them happy. We act for all because our hearts go out to all and we would give them a blessing.

When we act on this higher plane we are expressing our better natures, our souls. We are coming into harmony with the laws of our own being. We are shifting our point of motive from the brute self to the divine self. We are gaining harmony between the different elements of our own nature—that is, making the lower subject to the higher. We are making the lion and lamb, as both are expressed within us, lie down together, with the lamb as master. We are passing from a dual, warring nature into one at peace with itself.

This is the highest innate in each of us. It is the still, small voice truth without being told

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE

BIBLE-STUDY-ON

MERCY IS BETTER THAN SACRIFICE.

Genesis 43:1-46:7—June 8.

"Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" Psalm 133:1.

WHEN Joseph beheld how changed were his brethren, he sympathized with them. When he saw that their hearts went back to their wrong course in his own case, and that they realized Divine disapproval and were sorry, he pitied them. He wished, however, that the disclosure of his identity should not be witnessed by the Egyptians. So, after he had ordered all the Egyptians to leave the room, he made himself known, saying, "I am Joseph, whom ye sold into Egypt."

We can well imagine the consternation of the brethren. But Joseph, full of true sympathy and pity, hastened to set them at ease. He did not even chide them for their wrongdoing, realizing that sin had already brought its punishment. Alas, how few Christians under similar circumstances would have been so noble!

How beautifully Joseph typified Christ and His Spirit! How evidently our creeds of the Dark Ages misled us when they taught us to believe that all the Jews, brethren of Christ, were to be eternally tormented because they crucified Jesus! In the better light now shining from one page of the Bible to another, God's people see that Messiah purposes that Israel shall obtain Divine mercy and forgiveness, in the Millennial Kingdom.

Instead of their being punished with an eternity of torture, the Lord will be gracious to them. As He declares, "I will pour upon them the spirit of grace and of supplication." How beautiful, and how much in harmony with our typical lesson of today! Joseph's ten brethren apparently typified Israel, as the Egyptians typified the Gentiles, as Benjamin typified the Great Company, and as Joseph typified the Messianic class, the Elect, of whom Jesus is the Head, and the overcoming Church the Body.

Joseph was long misunderstood. Joseph's brethren failed to understand him—so great was the difference between their characters and his. Even after they had become more sympathetic and tender-hearted, they had still a sufficiency of bitterness of spirit and of animosity that, had they been in Joseph's place, they would have seen that somehow or other future punishments would have been meted out. They were, therefore, surprised by Joseph's words of brotherly kindness and sympathy, and unable to believe that he meant it. They concluded that he was dealing graciously with them for his father's sake.

So we find, years afterward, these ten brethren were in trepidation lest Joseph should wreak vengeance upon them after that Jacob had died. They went to him, asking for a continuance of his forgiveness. But Joseph comforted them, and spoke kindly unto them.—Genesis 50:19-21.

Jacob in Egypt. Joseph had planned that for the five remaining years of the famine, at least, his father Jacob and indeed the entire family should come into Egypt. He thought of the district styled Goshen as very suitable for them, being a cattle-grazing locality. Pharaoh gave full consent, and suggested that Egyptian wagons be sent to fetch Jacob and the women and children.

Joseph prepared delicacies for the journey and little presents, indicative of his love. He sent a special message to his father, and urged haste in coming into Egypt. Then he kissed them all goodbye, saying:

"Fall Not Out by the Way."

Evidently Joseph was a keen observer of human nature. Many would have thought it unnecessary to caution the brethren against disputes amongst themselves under all the circumstances. Many would have said, "They will be so overjoyed that love will prevail amongst them, and no disputes." The contrary, however, is often true. When prosperity comes, there are opportunities to feel more or less envy and selfishness.

Well it is that God's people should accept Joseph's words, "See that ye fall not out one with another by the way." It is the way planned for us by the Lord. It is a narrow, difficult way, full of adversity to the flesh, and trials and tests to the spirit. Proportionately, there should be love and sympathy, co-operation and helpfulness.

The words of the Psalmist, used as our Golden Text, were evidently prophetically written of the Church, the Lord's brethren. The Psalmist compares this unity of the brethren, the Church, to the precious ointment poured upon the head of the king and of the high priest on their induction into office. This anointing oil evidently typified the Holy Spirit. The priest typified the Royal Priest—Jesus the Head, and the Church His Body. The anointing of the Holy Spirit has continued, and gives an unction to all of His true members. By this anointing these may be recognized as one with Christ.

Where the Lemon Came From. The lemon, which is going to be dear this year on account of a shortage in the crop, has a very clear history. Unknown to the Greeks and Romans, it was introduced into Spain by the Arabs in the twelfth century, and in 1494 was being cultivated in the Azores and shipped in large quantities to England.

The lemon tree, of which there are forty-seven varieties, is particularly fertile, a good specimen in Italy ripening as many as 2,000 lemons during the season.

LENGTHENED YEARS OF LIFE

Modern Conditions, Strenuous as They Are, Have Not Shortened the Average of Man's Days.

Vital statistics show that, in spite of the strain of modern life, the average life-term is increasing. Medical men are pretty well agreed that this is due chiefly to the fact that we take better care of ourselves than our forefathers did.

There seem to be two important factors in this physical improvement. We live under better hygienic conditions, and we take less medicine.

Old-fashioned homes may have been romantic, and even comfortable, but they were less healthful than modern homes occupied by families of the same social station. Furnaces, hot water, ventilation, sanitary plumbing and garbage disposal work wonders in keeping strong people well, and in enabling sick persons to recover. Applied knowledge of disease germs helps to keep illness at bay. A patient can be as well cared for nowadays in an ordinary home by an intelligent woman as formerly in a hospital by a corps of physicians.

Material medica is not worshipped as of old. The modern physician gives few drugs, in small quantities. Some give none at all, merely promoting the natural operations of mind and body. Nearly all schools agree that the less "dope" taken into a system, the better, and drugs, once valued, are little more than a necessary evil. Physicians, in administering a remedy for a definite ailment, fear that the cure for one trouble may entail others. The self-curative power of the body, supported by cheerful mentality, is emphasized more and more.

Comfortable living quarters, nourishing food, sensible clothing, exercise, sunshine, fresh air, pleasant human associations, interesting work, optimism and the will to live, these are the superlative remedies against disease and death.

THIS LADY'S GOOD APPETITE

Mrs. Hansen, in a Letter From Mobile, Tells How She Gained It.

Mobile, Ala.—"I suffered for seven years, with womanly trouble," writes Mrs. Sigurd Hansen in a letter from this city. "I felt weak and always had a headache and was always going to the doctor. At last I was operated on, and felt better, but soon I had the same trouble.

My husband asked me to try Cardui. I felt better after the first bottle, and now, I have a good appetite and sleep well. I feel fine, and the doctor tells me I am looking better than he ever saw me."

If you are sick and miserable, and suffer from any of the pains due to womanly trouble—try Cardui. Cardui is successful because it is composed of ingredients that have been found to act curatively on the womanly constitution.

For more than fifty years, it has been used by women of all ages, with great success. Try it. Your druggist sells it.

HOMER'S HOMESICK

BIG NEW YORK DOES NOT SATISFY IN SUMMER TIME.

HE DREAMS OF "MARY"

As He Writes His Latest Story in Leslie's, "Mother and I Go Abroad," and the Secret is Out.

Homer Croy is getting homesick, we guess. He is over his eyes in work, of course, up there in New York, getting cut Leslie's Weekly. But it is the "good old summer time" now, and the beautiful sights and big noises of the city can't keep him from seeing the green fields and big trees around Maryville or from hearing the buzzing of the bees in the orchard out on his father's farm.

Along in May he had a story in Leslie's entitled "Mother and I Go Abroad," and of course, with so honey a title as that he just had to say something about Maryville, if only to use the name. So that is the reason we think he is homesick. It's near vacation time and he's naturally thinking about getting back to see the folks and rest. Here is the way the story goes:

"Mother," I said, setting down the coal bucket, "let's go abroad. Your black dress's good as new, and I haven't felt my rheumatism all summer."

"Oh, lawdy," said mother, wiping the crumbs off the oilcloth with the edge of her hand. "I'd just love to. I don't get the satisfaction out of stereoscope pictures I used to and we're getting along, but who'd take care of the chickens?"

"Pud Ratch," I said. "The doctor told him he mustn't eat anything fattening. You know how fat he is now—always has to rest between the front gate and the porch. We can trust them in his hands."

So we bargained with Pud Ratch and told him we'd bring him back something from Europe—a sacred beetle or a Dubar or something we could carry in our telescopes, and got ready to go.

"I want to climb Mount Matterhorn," said mother, "and have our pictures taken on top, my hand on your shoulder and you with your left hand up to your eyes and your right hand pointing off across the valley like those two Swiss people in that milk chocolate advertisement. Only I positively refuse to wear those short skirts. What would Brother Hamby think of me looking as though there was a rouse in my bedroom?"

"All right, mother. We'll have some lunch put up and go. Only we got to get back to the hotel early—you know what night air does to my rheumatism."

So everybody came down to the station to see us off.

"I want you to bring me some Colonial pewters," said Mrs. Houck. "I don't care what kind they are, just so long as they've got some English writing on them in which you can't tell an s from an f. Here's the money, and try to get saucers."

"I don't want to put you to any trouble," said Mrs. Sproud, who whistled through her nose, "but here's a piece of percale I wish you would match up over there in some German or Turkish department store. I've worn that dress eight years and every time any strangers come to town they think it is brand new, but everybody in Maryville is familiar with it. If I can get enough to make over the waist it'll look like a new dress. Be careful of your rheumatism over there, Isom—London's awfully damp."

Just before the train whistled in and everybody was getting pretty excited, and Mrs. Sproud was sitting down with her knees spread out as if she was stemming gooseberries, Brother Hamby of our church crooked his finger at me and led me clear around to where they loaded freight cars.

"Brother Isom," he said, wetting his lips and looking excited, "can I trust you?"

"Yes, Brother Hamby," I answered, like and actor.

"Here's a dollar. All my life I have been wanting to see what was in one of those knives that has a hole in it and you put it up to your eye and look in, then turn around to see if anybody is watching you. I'm getting old and I had that pain in my side again last week, and I can't die content until I know what is in one of those knives. Get mine in Paris, won't you?—and never tell anybody. Maybe you'd better send it back by mail as soon as you get there—I never know when that pain's coming back."

I asked him if he minded if I looked in the hole first, and he said no. Then I told him I didn't mind that job at all and would keep on looking till I found a good one.

Then the train started and everybody waved us good-by.

"Be sure to take good care of our chickens," I called to Pud Ratch, and he held up a fat arm that looked as though he was waving a sack of flour.

"Mother," I said, when we got to the dock, "look how big that ship is. It couldn't turn around in our chautauqua grounds, and it's got three chimneys. I'd hate to make the fires on this ship, and where do they keep their coal oil and cobs?"

Everybody was pushing and jamming as if the morning mail had just come in.

"Mother," I said, looking at the great white ship, "what a noble and inspiring sight this master of the briny deep is, floating as calm and peaceful as a shingle in a bathtub."

Oh, by the way, Isom," said Mo, "did you tell Mr. Sproud to fix the plumbing in the kitchen before we got back?"

"We must hunt up the captain and tell him we're here safe and sound, and ask him to show us our bedroom," I said, trying to make mother feel comfortable. "It would be nice if he knew somebody back in Maryville and would give us a bedroom near the kitchen—walking must be hard, as trembly as these ships are, and especially when the wind's up."

"Yes, I wouldn't be surprised if he knew somebody from Maryville," she said. "I never met anybody in my life who didn't know somebody from there or who hadn't been through there. When I tell them about our City Beautiful and our lecture course, they all promise to come and visit us."

I went up to a man with a serious look on his face and shiny buttons on his coat and said, "Are you the captain?"

"No," he said, "I am the steward. You will find the captain below."

"Below what?" I asked.

Mr. Steward shifted his feet and smiled kind of foolishly. "Why, just below," he explained, looking at us harder than ever.

Then I saw that this must be his first trip over and didn't bother with him any more.

Then I went up to another man with gold braid on his cap, and asked him who was the captain.

"No, I'm the second steward—the captain's aft."

"I just met your brother, I said, "and he said that the captain was down in the basement. I should think that he ought to be in the parlor making the people feel at home."

I guess that cut him pretty hard, for he walked over to another employee and began talking and looking at mother and me.

"They must be twins," said mother.

"Who?" I asked.

"Why, the Stewards boys. They both got the same kind of caps and buttons. It's nice if they can both be together—I wonder if they write home often."

I saw a man with whiskers standing out on deck.

"Have you seen Captain Aft lately?" I asked.

He winked hard and shook his whiskers like a rug. "I am the captain, but my name is Sproud."

"Oh, exclaimed mother. "Are you any relation to Claude Sproud of Maryville?"

"I am afraid not," said the captain, hunting through his whiskers for a raveling. "Is there anything I can do for you?"

"Can you put us where we can get the morning sun?"

"There's lots of it on deck."

I couldn't get over their having an elevator on the ship, and I rode up and down so many times that I got right well acquainted with the man who had the concession. He said he had heard of Maryville but had never been in it. Another thing that got my eye was having a swimming tank on the ship and a foot doctor. His wife had run away and left him, but I kind of think he drank.

One day the ship began to pitch and heave. I could feel something rolling around inside my stomach like a loose doorknob and I rushed to the front porch to—but that is a personal matter. After I had got my stomach content with its lot in life I saw that my neighbor was mother.

"You seem to have a weak stomach, Mother," I said.

"Watch how far I am going," said mother, "and you won't call it weak!"

After we got quiet again, we found what good eating they had, and I began to put on weight as if I was in a stall. "I'd like to know who their cook is," said mother. "I wonder what magazine she reads. I can't quite make out her nationality. Sometimes the bill of fare has French words and sometimes German and sometimes Italian and sometimes I guess she was in a hurry and didn't spell very well. I wonder if she goes to church on Sun-

MRS. BAXTER IS COMING

Kirkville Woman Will Speak—Want Clean Up Before the White Way Celebration.

It is the universal opinion that Maryville must clean up before the opening of the great white way celebration.

Some ten thousand visitors are expected to be in the city June 18.

Let's show them the great white way.

Let's show them the new postoffice. Let's show them the Normal school. Let's show them our beautiful homes.

Let's show them a clean city in black type and capitals.

How are we going to do this? Come out to the citizens' civic meeting Thursday, June 12.

Mrs. Clarence Baxter of Kirkville, Mo., whom the St. Joseph News-Press described as "A woman who would have been president of the greatest commercial club in America, if only she had been born a man," is to be with us.

Mrs. Baxter comes here at the invitation of the Commercial club and the Federation of Women's Clubs.

She will tell us the story of how Kirkville cleaned up.

She will entice us to clean up the city.

Come out and hear her.

Watch the papers daily, for the big movement is now on.

SHOULD BE STOPPED.

Automobile Drivers Ought to Be Careful When Driving in Front of Churches on Sunday evening.

The automobile drivers ought to be careful when they are driving on Sunday evening and ought to pay a little heed to people who are attending church services. Many complaints have been made of the great noise of the autos, especially while near a church which greatly annoys the people in attendance at the church service and also the minister. It is thought that if the attention of the motorists is called to this matter, they will probably heed the request.

SUDDEN DEATH FROM APOPLEXY.

George L. Fisher Died Thursday Morning at 6:30. After Two Hours' Illness.

George L. Fisher, an old resident of Maryville, died Thursday morning at 6:30 o'clock of apoplexy, with which he was stricken about two hours previous to his death. Mr. Fisher had been about as usual Wednesday and in the evening had attended to several little chores he had taken upon himself to do since he has been at the home of his son, Jesse L. Fisher, at 719 East Fourth street, where his death occurred.

Mr. Fisher and his wife had been at their son's home for two months or more, where Mrs. Fisher was taken with pneumonia and from which she is just now slowly recovering. About 4:30 Thursday morning Mrs. Fisher was awakened by Mr. Fisher's restlessness. She spoke to him several times and asked him if he was ill, and receiving no reply called to her son and his family, who were sleeping in a tent in the yard. By the time they reached the sick man he appeared in a dying condition, and the arrival of a physician confirmed their fears, for nothing could be done to save his life.

The funeral arrangements will not be completed until the arrival of a son, Rev. Grundy Fisher of Minneapolis, Minn.

Mr. Fisher was born in Jefferson county, Ohio, April 20, 1834, and went to Iowa in young manhood and later came to Missouri. He was married at Stewartville, Mo., April 1, 1868, to Miss Lucy Grundy. They came to Maryville about thirty years ago and have lived at their home at 910 East Fifth street ever since. Two sons were born to them, Rev. Grundy Fisher, pastor of the First Christian church at Minneapolis, and Jesse L. Fisher, who is in the plumbing business in this city.

Mr. Fisher had been a consistent member of the Christian church since young manhood.

Good for Its Own Sake.

By James A. Edgerton.

A principle is impersonal. It belongs to one as much as another. It belongs to him most who most belongs to it, who is most loyal to it. Good is principle. It should be loved because it is good.

The right thing is the only thing worth while. Wrong is a negation, a subtraction from our attainment and happiness. We talk of self denial, but we deny ourselves the thing that is not for us in order that we may have more abundantly of the thing that is for us.

In the real sense the only self denial is in doing evil. That does take away from us actually. But to deny ourselves a thing that injures another is to injure ourselves for action and reaction are equal. So that to refrain from injuring another actually helps ourselves.

This, in a way, is the selfish view of the case. We do right because that there is an instinct in the soul that furnishes us most happiness. But tells us to do good without stopping to consider what its effects on us may be; to do good because it is good; to do good for the good's sake. And this is the proper motive from which to act. This takes out the element of self seeing and puts us on the impersonal plane of acting from a principle. In this case we help others because we wish them well and want to make them happy. We act for all because our hearts go out to all and we would give them a blessing.

When we act on this higher plane we are expressing our better natures, our souls. We are coming into harmony with the laws of our own being. We are shifting our point of motive from the brute self to the divine self. We are gaining harmony between the different elements of our own nature—that is, making the lower subject to the higher. We are making the lion and lamb, as both are expressed within us, lie down together, with the lamb as master. We are passing from a dual, warring nature into one of peace with itself.

This is the highest innate in each of us. If to the still, small voice truth without being to

All seeming good that is not in conformity to this real good is a delusion. There is not truth but truth. That truth is in our souls, and if we but hearken to its promptings it will show us the way.

The lesson of living is to learn how to do good for its own sake.

BIBLE STUDY—ON
MERCY IS BETTER THAN SACRIFICE.

Genesis 45:1-46:7—June 8.

"Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" Psalm 133:1.

WHEN Joseph beheld how changed were his brethren, he sympathized with them. When he saw that their hearts went back to their wrong course in his own case, and that they realized Divine disapproval and were sorry, he pitied them. He wished, however, that the disclosure of his identity should not be witnessed by the Egyptians. So, after he had ordered all the Egyptians to leave the room, he made himself known, saying, "I am Joseph, whom ye sold into Egypt."

We can well imagine the consternation of the brethren. But Joseph, full of true sympathy and pity, hastened to set them at ease. He did not even chide them for their wrongdoing, realizing that sin had already brought its punishment. Alas, how few Christians under similar circumstances would have been so noble!

How beautifully Joseph typified Christ and His Spirit! How evidently our creeds of the Dark Ages misled us when they taught us to believe that all the Jews, brethren of Christ, were to be eternally tormented because they crucified Jesus! In the better light now shining from one page of the Bible to another, God's people see that Messiah purposes that Israel shall obtain Divine mercy and forgiveness, in the Millennial Kingdom.

Instead of their being punished with an eternity of torture, the Lord will be gracious to them. As He declares, "I will pour upon them the spirit of grace and of supplication." How beautiful, and how much in harmony with our typical lesson of today! Joseph's ten brethren apparently typified Israel, as the Egyptians typified the Gentiles, as Benjamin typified the Great Company, and as Joseph typified the Messianic Class, the Elect, of whom Jesus is the Head, and the overcoming Church the Body.

Joseph Was Long Misunderstood. Joseph's brethren failed to understand him—so great was the difference between their characters and his. Even after they had become more sympathetic and tender-hearted, they had still a sufficiency of bitterness of spirit and of animosity that, had they been in Joseph's place, they would have seen that somehow or other future punishments would have been meted out. They were, therefore, surprised by Joseph's words of brotherly kindness and sympathy, and unable to believe that he meant it. They concluded that he was dealing graciously with them for his father's sake.

So we find, years afterward, these ten brethren were in trepidation lest Joseph should wreak vengeance upon them after that Jacob had died. They went to him, asking for a continuance of his forgiveness. But Joseph comforted them, and spake kindly unto them.—Genesis 50:19-21.

Jacob in Egypt. Joseph had planned that for the five remaining years of the famine, at least, his father Jacob and indeed the entire family should come into Egypt. He thought of the district styled Goshen as very suitable for them, being a cattle-grazing locality. Pharaoh gave full consent, and suggested that Egyptian wagons be sent to fetch Jacob and the women and children.

Joseph prepared delicacies for the journey and little presents, indicative of his love. He sent a special message to his father, and urged haste in coming into Egypt. Then he kissed them all goodbye, saying:

"Fall Not Out by the Way." Evidently Joseph was a keen observer of human nature. Many would have thought it unnecessary to caution the brethren against disputes amongst themselves under all the circumstances. Many would have said, "They will be so overjoyed that love will prevail amongst them, and no disputes." The contrary, however, is often true. When prosperity comes, there are opportunities to feel more or less envy and selfishness.

Well it is that God's people should accept Joseph's words, "See that ye fall not out one with another by the way." It is the way planned for us by the Lord. It is a narrow, difficult way, full of adversities to the flesh, and trials and tests to the spirit. Proportionately, there should be love and sympathy, co-operation and helpfulness.

The words of the Psalmist, used as our Golden Text, were evidently prophetically written of the Church, the Lord's brethren. The Psalmist compares this unity of the brethren, the Church, to the precious ointment poured upon the head of the king and of the high priest on their induction into office. This anointing oil evidently typified the Holy Spirit. The priest typified the Royal Priest—Jesus the Head, and the Church His Body. The anointing of the Holy Spirit has continued, and gives an unction to all of His true members. By this anointing these may be recognized as one with Christ.

Where the Lemon Came From. The lemon, which is going to be dear this year on account of a shortage in the crop, has a very clear history. Unknown to the Greeks and Romans, it was introduced into Spain by the Arabs in the twelfth century, and in 1494 was being cultivated in the Azores and shipped in large quantities to England.

The lemon tree, of which there are forty-seven varieties, is particularly fertile, a good specimen in Sicily ripening as many as 3,000 lemons during the season.

LENGTHENED YEARS OF LIFE

Modern Conditions, Strenuous as They Are, Have Not Shortened the Average of Man's Days.

Vital statistics show that, in spite of the strain of modern life, the average life-term is increasing. Medical men are pretty well agreed that this is due chiefly to the fact that we take better care of ourselves than our forefathers did.

There seem to be two important factors in this physical improvement. We live under better hygienic conditions, and we take less medicine.

Old-fashioned homes may have been romantic, and even comfortable, but they were less healthful than modern homes occupied by families of the same social station. Furnaces, hot water, ventilation, sanitary plumbing and garbage disposal work wonders in keeping strong people well, and in enabling sick persons to recover. Applied knowledge of disease germs helps to keep illness at bay. A patient can be as well cared for nowadays in an ordinary home by an intelligent woman as formerly in a hospital by a corps of physicians.

Material medica is not worshipped as of old. The modern physician gives few drugs, in small quantities. Some give none at all, merely promoting the natural operations of mind and body. Nearly all schools agree that the less "dose" taken into a system, the better, and drugs, once valued, are little more than a necessary evil. Physicians, in administering a remedy for a definite ailment, fear that the cure for one trouble may entail others. The self-curative power of the body, supported by cheerful mentality, is emphasized more and more.

Comfortable living quarters, nourishing food, sensible clothing, exercise, sunshine, fresh air, pleasant human associations, interesting work, optimism and the will to live, these are the superlative remedies against disease and death.

THIS LADY'S GOOD APPETITE

Mrs. Hansen, in a Letter From Mobile, Tells How She Gained It.

Mobile, Ala.—"I suffered for seven years, with womanly trouble," writes Mrs. Sigurd Hansen in a letter from this city. "I felt weak and always had a headache and was always going to the doctor. At last I was operated on, and felt better, but soon I had the same trouble."

My husband asked me to try Cardui. I felt better after the first bottle, and now, I have a good appetite and sleep well. I feel fine, and the doctor tells me I am looking better than he ever saw me."

If you are sick and miserable, and suffer from any of the pains due to womanly trouble—try Cardui.

Cardui is successful because it is composed of ingredients that have been found to act curatively on the womanly constitution.

For more than fifty years, it has been used by women of all ages, with great success. Try it. Your druggist sells it.
